

Reference From John Lawson – 19 January 2013

My name is John Lawson and I have worked alongside Tony Anthony for the last 5 years.

I can verify that in 2013, I visited a Chinese Church in the UK where I heard Tony give a short greeting and introduction to the audience in his mother dialect of Cantonese. I also remember Tony speaking in Cantonese on another occasion at the “Chinese Church in London” back in 2008 where I first met up with him after my release from prison.

I have also been taught to say a couple of words in Chinese by Tony and have been educated on the appropriate etiquette when meeting, socialising and interacting with Chinese people.

He has demonstrated an extensive knowledge of Chinese culture, including authentic Chinese food (not the European version) and at restaurants I have seen him order food and pronounce Chinese words, which I personally find very challenging to say.

My experience is that he is warmly embraced by the Chinese community who demonstrated no doubts regarding his Chinese upbringing and past.

From my personal experience I do not doubt Tony grew up in China.
